Red Flags that Indicate Recruitment Fraud

- Infognana never asks for fees or deposits for any reason during or after the hiring process. So if you are asked by anyone to make a deposit, it is most likely to be a scam. In case you have already made such a payment, please complain to the nearest police station so that they can identify these fraudsters and take strict action against them.

- Such fake emails are usually ridden with grammar and spelling errors.
- Interview addresses and contact details given in such letters are most often invalid. We conduct at least one in-person interview at Infognana office premises at the address mentioned on our website. All the interviewers will carry an Infognana ID card.
- The interview call letter will be sent from an email address with the domain “@infognana.com” and not through personal email ids or instant messaging applications. Sometimes even the domain can be made to appear genuine with the @infognana.com domain in the sent address displayed through a practice called spoofing but receiving emails will be possible only with the legitimate “@infognana.com” domain. If any email ID with Gmail/yahoo domain is copied while receiving a job offer or interview call, please be cautious.
- The Infognana hiring team will also not request candidates to submit personal documents like bank account details, tax forms, or credit card information as part of the recruitment process.

If you come across any suspicious email, advertisements, or any other communication from persons offering jobs at Infognana, please report it to us immediately at hrd@infognana.com.
